Cut through the black line

It's a hot, sunny day in Zoolandia.

Nico the chameleon is spending the day at the beach with his dad and little sisters.

2

He has been sunbathing all morning to get as tan as possible. But suddenly, he starts to feel sick...

3

He has a headache, things are blurry, and he's so dizzy he throws up!

4

Croco Doc tells him that the most important thing is to put on a lot of sunscreen.

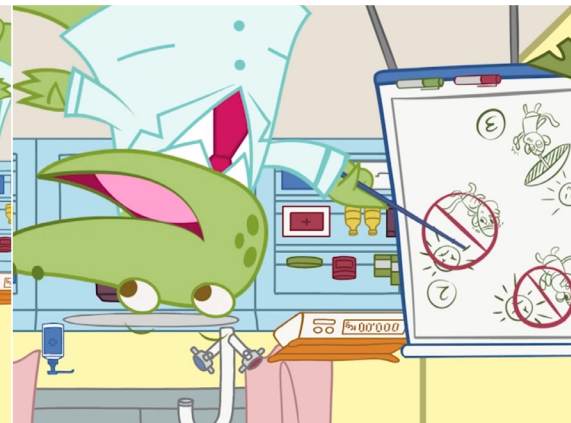

This will help protect Nico from the harmful sun's rays.

7

At the hospital, Croco Doc examines Nico and is sure that he has heat stroke from spending too much time in the sun.

5

Nico has to be more careful on hot, sunny days.

It's important to find cool, shady places, stay hydrated, and wear a hat or something to cover your head.

Well, two problems...
His sisters won't get out of the bathroom!

There's just one tiny problem with drinking so much...
He has to pee so bad!

Nico needs an IV to help rehydrate him. After a little pinch, the fluid starts to go into his veins.

Nico has to rest for a few hours in the hospital so the IV fluid can help him get better.

But Crat shouldn't be resting...he should be working!

Croco Doc tells Nico's dad that it's important for his son to drink plenty of fluids.

He also gives him a pain medicine, in case he needs it.

Nico has already drank seven juice boxes since he's been home, but he's so thirsty that he drinks an entire jug of water too!
