Nico's eye is bothering him.

It feels like there's sand in it, so his mom decides to take him to see the doctor.

4

Croco Doc carefully examines Nico's eye.

He is sure that he has an eye infection called pink eye!

5

He then puts antibiotic eye drops
in Nico's eye.
He is going to have to use them
every four hours until his eye is better.

The first thing Croco Doc does is clean out his eye.

Nico's parents have to buy gauze and a saline solution to clean his eye for when they go home.

Croco Doc explains that pink eye occurs when the layer that protects the eye, the conjunctiva layer, becomes irritated and infected by bacteria.

He also tells Nico to be very careful not to rub his eyes because the infection could spread.

It can even spread from one eye to the other!

He has to go back to the hospital one last time to have his eye checked, but Croco Doc is out for the day.

After a few days of using the eye drops and cleaning his eyes, Nico is back to normal!
