Cut through the black line

Scott the squirrel and his friends are on a treasure hunt.

Scott thinks that the last clue is inside a little door in the lamp post.

7

Scott's burn was caused by electricity, not by fire, so the first thing Croco Doc does is clean the wound with water.

As soon as Scott touches the wires, he gets electrocuted! Ouch!

Scott's mom is very worried about him. Croco Doc tells Scott that what he did was very dangerous and warns him not to touch wires ever again!

His friends call an ambulance as fast as they can. Carla the gorilla, one of Zoolandia's nurses, takes Scott to the hospital right away.

Croco Doc then puts an antibiotic cream on the burn.

Scott is going to have to use the cream for the next few days.

Croco Doc knows that other children could get hurt, just like Scott did, so he calls the mayor of Zoolandia. He tells her what happened, and that the lamp post with the exposed wires in the park needs to be fixed right away!

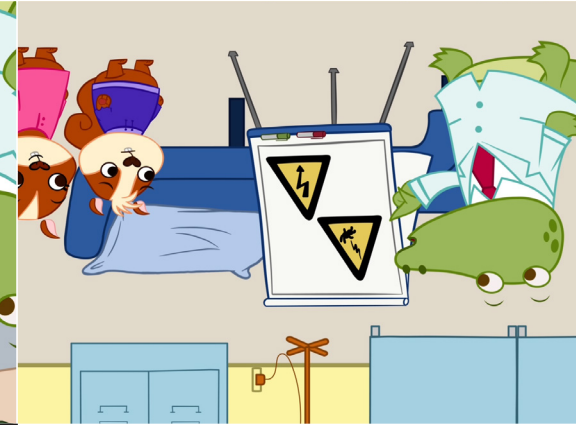

Scott can't leave the hospital just yet. Croco Doc needs to observe him for a little while to make sure everything is okay.

Luckily, his mother brought his favorite comic books for him to read.

A few days later, the burn has healed and Scott is feeling great!

Before they leave, Croco Doc explains to them that everyone needs to be very careful with electricity. Electrical appliances, wires, and cords can be very dangerous and cause a lot of harm if you're not careful.
